Dear Friends:

If you are a homeowner, you may be able to get a forbearance on your mortgage. The law requires that homeowners in a federal disaster area are given this option if they request it and Florida has been declared a federal disaster area.

A mortgage forbearance allows a person to stop making payments, or to make partial payments for a specific length of time agreed upon with the mortgage lender.

The forbearance is not automatic and you must reach out to your mortgage lender and request it or apply for it.

Many credit card companies are also offering a disaster forbearance for credit card bills. In order to find out if you are eligible, please check with your credit card company and with your mortgage lender to see if they are participating and if you qualify.
